SITUATION SUMMARY

Railcar Derailment, Antelope, Sacramento County (New/Final)

On 1/5/15 at 1812 hours, Union Pacific Railroad (UPRR) advised of a derailment located at Antelope North Road and Poker Lane in the city of Antelope, Sacramento County.

Per Cal OES Duty Officers:

- Unified Command (Sac Metro FD, Roseville FD, UPRR) – LRA.
- UPRR reported a derailment of 7 cars one of which was placarded “2078” – Toluene Diisocyanate.
- The UP manifest indicated the affected car was empty but the placard was still in place - All precautions were taken.
- Sac Metro HM-109 and Roseville HM-TF-1 along with UPRR HAZMAT were dispatched.
- When crews reached the car, it was still upright but leaning to one side. There was no evidence of leakage. There was no damage to the undercarriage and the top of the car was intact.
- The crews took readings using separate detectors from HM-109 and HM-TF-1. All readings were 0.00 – it was concluded that the car had been emptied and decon’ed but the placard was mistakenly not removed.
- An adjacent car was on its side and crews at first noticed leakage from the top of the car. There was no placard on the car.
- Readings were taken of the fine white powder leaking from the car and all readings were 0.00 and the UPRR manifest confirmed that it was a non-hazardous substance.
- No injuries reported and all cars have been set upright by UPRR.
- Rail line is now open.

The California State Warning Center conducted all appropriate notifications, including but not limited to local government agencies.

This will be the final report on this incident unless circumstances warrant.

Mid and high clouds will spread into Northern California this morning in response to the front offshore trying to move ashore; however, the strong ridge will keep the front offshore until Thursday. The upper level front could weaken to a trough and finally push inland on Friday. The mountains will be quite warm with a strong inversion in the valleys, continuing the air stagnation advisory through Thursday.

Reno Weather:

High pressure will prevail through this week with dry conditions and above normal temperatures for the forecast area. Light winds and inversions will produce degraded air quality at times in urban valleys.

San Francisco Weather:

High pressure will be the dominant feature this week bringing much warmer than normal temperatures to the region, especially today and Wednesday. Patchy night and morning fog is likely in the North and East Bay Valleys. No major storms are forecast through the middle of next week.

Sacramento Weather:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure and offshore wind will bring above normal temperatures and fair skies through Thursday. Low pressure will arrive on Friday to increase cloud coverage and drop the temperatures to near normal through the weekend.

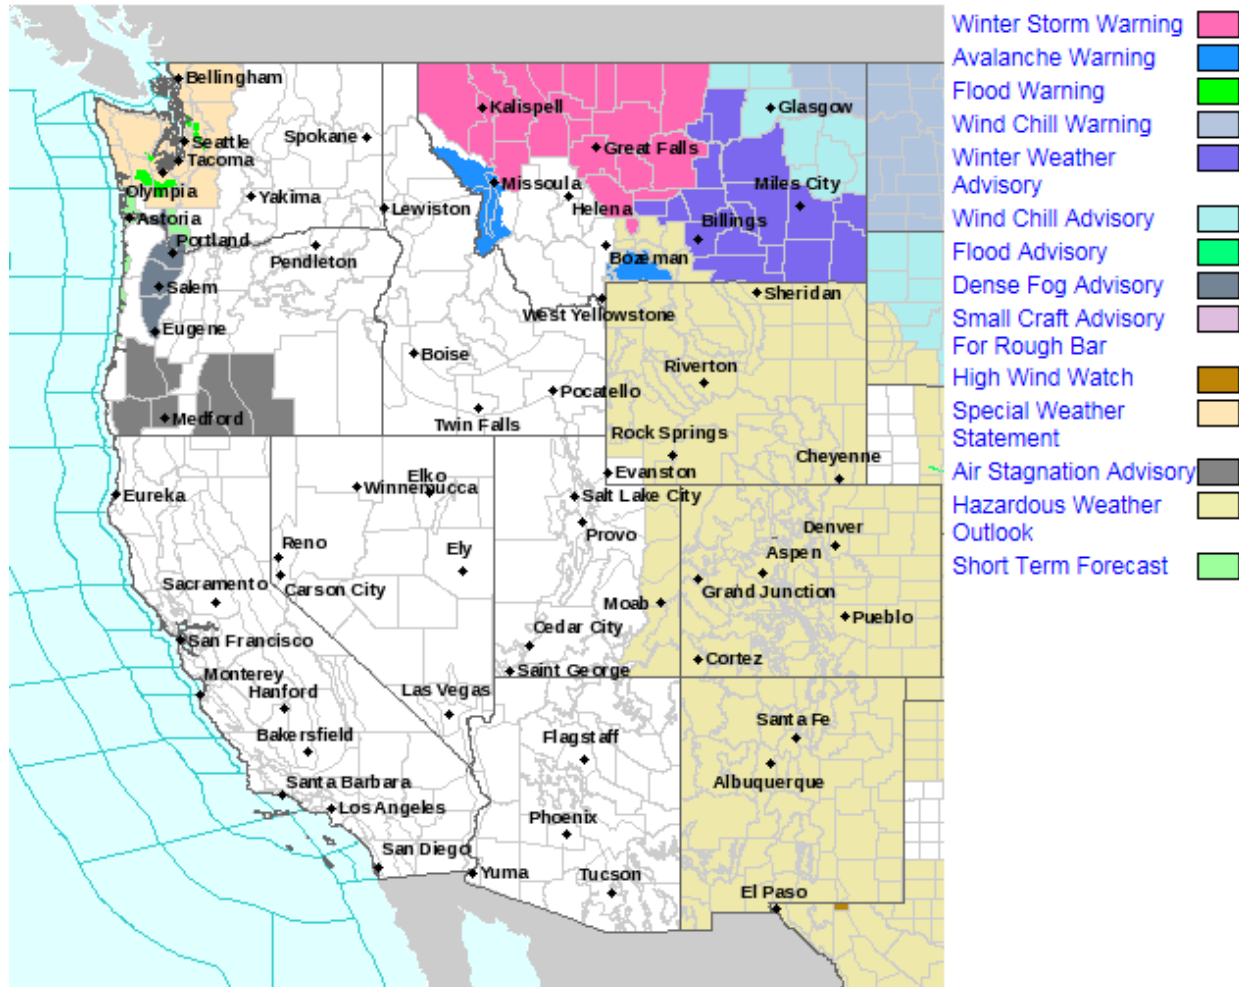

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Dry north to northwest flow aloft will provide warmer weather with occasional high clouds. Wednesday into Friday, a weak weather system from off the Baja Coast will move inland and provide considerable cloudiness to the region.
